

Financial Aid Graduate Assistantship Position Description

The graduate assistant in the University Office of Scholarships & Financial Aid (UOSFA) works on project-based tasks supporting effective, efficient, and inclusive delivery and/or management of scholarship and financial aid programs at the U. Projects are designed to span either a single semester or an academic year, and are arranged after joint consultation between the graduate assistant and UOSFA supervisor regarding office needs and the graduate assistant's area(s) of expertise and academic/career interests. Examples of project topics include: analyzing consumption and use of UOSFA communication materials (including leading student focus groups); analysis of financial aid program utilization by major/college; developing materials identifying areas of overlap between UOSFA and other university departments; assisting with technology implementation projects to improve student experience and processing efficiency, etc. Other project ideas of interest to graduate assistant are welcomed.

Salary is $24,000 plus the opportunity for hybrid work (i.e., balance of in-person versus remote work).
